

I graduated from Rhode Island College where I completed a dual BA/MA in Psychology. Education has always provided me with a safe place to feel seen and heard while simultaneously fostering a sense of independence and self-advocacy from the challenges education can also bring. Being the first person to graduate from higher education in my immediate family, I have first-hand experience of navigating the higher education system and not being able to always rely on those closest to me for help. I learned how to advocate and find resources for myself that helped me to graduate. I am excited to use this experience and my joy of connecting individuals to resources and opportunities in this role. I look forward to connecting with you to learn how Blueprint can help you and who you want to become.
