Description

The CUNY Craig Newmark Graduate School of Journalism (Newmark J-School) prepares students from a broad range of economic, racial and ethnic backgrounds to produce high-quality journalism at a time of rapid change. Newmark J-School is the only publicly funded graduate journalism school in the heart of the media capital of NYC. The Newmark J-School boasts three grant-funded centers that serve as hubs for education, research, training, events, and professional support for working journalists.

HAS THIS PROGRAM BEEN SUSPENDED DUE TO COVID-19? No. However, due to COVID-19, in-person classes have been suspended or moved to the web. In-person meetings have been limited and restricted to by appointment only. Additional guidance on Newmark J-School's response to COVID-19 is available here www.journalism.cuny.edu/covid-19-guidance.

ABOUT CUNY: The City University of New York (CUNY) has 24 modern campuses spanning the five boroughs of New York, including; Senior Colleges, Community Colleges, and Graduate Schools.

Providing a quality, accessible education, regardless of background or means, has been CUNY's mission since 1847. Every year, hundreds of thousands of students – including a record 274,000 degree-credit students – choose The City University of New York for a multitude of reasons that can be summed up as one: opportunity.

The University's seven community colleges provide a high-quality education through associate degree programs that prepare students for transfer to senior colleges or entry into professional careers. The CUNY Graduate Center offers more than 30 doctoral programs. CUNY School of Public Health and Health Policy, a collaboration of four CUNY institutions, offers master's and doctoral degrees. The CUNY School of Law is recognized as the nation's premier public-interest law school.
